A look at county's highway aid

he said.

"We've got very sophisticated ways of evaluating projects," he said. "Once you've got a formula, it's very hard to change."

He said Bucks County's share of funds can't be assessed by looking only at the current plan. "When you're evaluating fairness, you have to look backward as well. When we go back five years, we see a balance in total investment."

McHugh said the league's report would be forwarded to PennDOT and local officials. "We hope they'll take notice and that they'll respond," he said.

Robert Moore, executive director of the Bucks County Planning Commission, said county residents are well aware of traffic congestion, especially on secondary state and local roads.

Those roads, he said, "are what used to be called an arterial highway system before it developed arterio-sclerosis."

Among Bucks County's most pressing highway needs, he said, are improvements to Route 202 between Doylestown and Montgomeryville, Route 313 from Doylestown to the Northeastern Extension of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, and all along Route 413.
