Riley, a 6-2, 215-pound tackle, was honored with the selection of honorary captain for the 1977 season which saw the Redskins tie for the Lower Bucks County League championship. Langhorne lost the playoff crown when it was jolted by Bensalem Township, 12-7.

Seven other Neshaminy gridders came in for awards. Tom Calkins (6-1, 208, fullback) was named "Mr. Back." Calkins was cited for his play during the season by the Maxwell Club of Philadelphia. Alex Puketzo (5-9, 176, guard) was declared "Mr. Line," and Chris Bezick (5-10, 182, end) walked off with "Mr. Defense" honors.

"Mr. Unsung Hero" went to the highly-popular Gerry Wright, a 6-0, 258-pound tackle who took a lot of kidding but didn't mind it at all. Wright especially enjoyed a loud hand when he stepped forward to accept his plaque.

Chris Cechak (6-1, 193-pound center) claimed Langhorne's 3D Award (drive, determination, desire). Cechak is a scholar-athlete.

The most interesting award of the affair went to Bruce Moyer, a 5-9, 170-pound offensive guard. Moyer was named "Mr. Offense," for his ability to lead Langhorne's powerful sweeps.

THIS CORNER was saddened with the untimely death of Dick Hyneman, 38, of Penndel. Mr. Hyneman coached Neshaminy Langhorne's varsity baseball team for 10 seasons. He guided the Redskins from 1967 through the 1976 campaign. During that span Langhorne captured the Section One title of the Lower Bucks County League in 1970 and 1971 and narrowly missed the flag again in 1972. In that three-year span Langhorne had a 40-7 record.

In a decade Mr. Hyneman's teams were 85-60 in the LBCL and 104-64 in all games. He produced a pair of conference batting champions in Joe Sroba (1972) and Mark Donahue (1973).

During that period four Langhorne pitchers were declared pitching champions, including Ken Herb (1969), Ed Riley (1970), Len Barker
