

Ol' Neshaminy wasn't sleeping over the weekend either, and got in its licks against Wilson Friday night by pummelling the Golden Rams, 54-0. That averages out to 56.5 points in the past two games for the Redmen without having their goal line crossed.

Racking up shoutouts this season has been common stuff (they've got four) with the powerful Redskins. But it'll wrinkle many a brow trying to recall when Neshaminy got collared itself. It hasn't happened since Pennridge authored a 13-0 blanking to start the 1957 campaign.
